About the Family

I'm married to Diana D. Trejo; we are both from Mexico. We have two daughters with finished careers. They don't live with us at this moment because their work is currently based in Houston, Texas.

The pastor's family is a testimony—not of perfection, but of God's grace in real life. When the home is filled with prayer, forgiveness, laughter and love, it becomes a refuge not only for me but also a model for the flock I shepherd. But Scripture reminds me that caring for our family is a biblical qualification for shepherding others (1 Timothy 3:4-5). The way you love your family is a living sermon that speaks volumes to your church.

About My Church Plant

I'm a bivocational pastor. It's not always easy—time is limited, energy gets stretched—but it's a beautiful testimony of sacrificial love. Every sermon I prepare after a long day, every hospital visit I make on my lunch break, every prayer whispered between tasks—God sees it all, and it is precious to Him. Being bivocational means I'm not just balancing two jobs—I'm serving God in two mission fields—the church and the marketplace. This gives me a powerful platform to model servant leadership, humility and faithfulness in everyday life. I'm showing our congregation that ministry is not confined to the pulpit but is lived out in the rhythms of work, family and community.

PRAY.

Spiritual Strength: Pray I may remain faithful, encouraged and rooted in God's Word as I shepherd His flock

Wisdom and Guidance: Pray I can discern God's will in every decision, both in ministry and personal life.

Family: Pray we would have protection, unity and joy in our home, that together we may be a light to others

The Church: Pray God would deepen our love for Him, strengthen our fellowship and open new doors for sharing the gospel.

Community Outreach: Pray hearts would be softened to receive the hope we have in Christ.

PARTICIPATE

Participate by:

- Spiritually leading, not just attending.
 - Being present for people's needs.
 - Representing Christ and your church family.
 - Offering biblical perspective.
 - Serving in practical ways. Preaching, leading worship, praying over someone, helping set up chairs, or washing dishes after a fellowship meal.
- Servant leadership is still leadership.
