About the Family

I live in East Boston, Mass. I am originally from Knoxville, Tenn., where I attended the University of Tennessee and earned my undergraduate degree. I am currently a master's student at Gordon Conwell Theological Seminary studying mental health counseling and intercultural studies.

I enjoy hiking and backpacking and playing almost every sport. I have three older brothers who are each married and who are spread across the country. My parents reside in Knoxville, Tenn.

About My Ministry

I am serving as the assistant director of NextGen Boston and am focused on the mobilization of the next generation. My hope is to equip and challenge students to live their lives as everyday, Spirit-led missionaries to reach the nations, specifically in Boston. I serve as the discipleship and leadership development leader for all females and interview students in order to best place them on teams. Finally, I am working to develop a pipeline for students who are called to do ministry in Boston in order to encourage living life on mission in the context of their local church plant.

I also serve the students and young adults of Church at the Well by leading a weekly Bible study and monthly youth nights. My vision for each of these ministries is to inspire a culture of discipleship that works to advance His kingdom.
